

Health briefs

Published: Wednesday, March 17, 2010

Antioch hosting expo on Autism/Asperger's

Antioch University New England will co-host an Autism and Asperger's Exposition Saturday in the main lobby and community room at 40 Avon St., Keene.

This year's free expo will include an award given to the Doug Flutie Foundation for its support of Antioch's Center for Autism Spectrum Disorders Training and support of other autism- and Asperger's-related services in the region.

Writer Carol Ann Edscorn of Jaffrey, who was diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome in 1995, will speak at 2:05 p.m.

Exhibitors will display materials from noon to 2 p.m. in the university's lobby and presentations will run from noon to 3.

http://www.keenesentinel.com/articles/2010/03/17/features/health_fitness/free/id_394097.txt