

Environment briefs

Published: Monday, January 11, 2010

Workshop on rain gardens is for teachers

A workshop for teachers will provide tips for using rain gardens as teaching tools this month at Antioch University New England.

The Cheshire County Conservation District and Antioch University will offer this free, hands-on session for teachers of all grade levels on Jan. 23 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Registration is required by Jan. 15.

The class will provide information on what a rain garden is, curriculum support, computer networking, classroom activities, garden designs and plan lists.

To register, call 756-2988 extension 116 or e-mail amanda.costello@nh.nacdnet.net.